

You Could Lose Money if You Don't Read This.

One successful home business millionaire recommends that beginner investors and entrepreneurs find an established company, (ie: one with the kinks worked out), become a distributor, market the business in new and exciting ways and you

WILL become successful. That's what we are doing here.

Are you willing to invest time AND money into building your own home-based business?

(True fact) ALL businesses require an investment of time AND some money.

If you don't agree to this fact, then don't waste your time trying to create a business of ANY kind. It does not work! You can't create income from thin air!! I've tried.

Most people start businesses to make money.

Believe it or not, some people start businesses as a hobby, to have something to do.

When we say "business" here, we mean the money-making kind. Let's continue.

How to make money 50 years ago.

Get a loan or spend your life savings to rent or buy a building. Then purchase inventory and sell your inventory to customers for 3 or 4 times more than what you paid for it.

Hopefully, you are selling something that people need or want. Then repeat the process over and over for years to come. Save money. Retire.= Done.

Then, Mr. "Mart" figured out a different way.

Get loan or savings. Get building. Buy inventory. Sell inventory for only 1 or 2 dollars more than what you paid for it but sell a thousand more items of inventory.

Surprise! You've made more money than everyone else selling the same items.

Then you talk manufacturers into putting their products in your building for FREE and then just pay for inventory AFTER you sell it. Since you are now selling everything that the other stores are selling, except for a lot less, you can run all of the other stores out of business and corner the retail market.

This also prevents any newcomers from starting a business because it's way too expensive for anyone to compete.

Then comes the internet. (Don't get scared, Keep reading)

The money that you spend on inventory, buildings, utilities, employees, and other stuff you need to have a business is known as "overhead".

After you sell your inventory, you deduct what you paid for "overhead" from the money you made and that's known as "profit". (The part you take home and spend.)

The internet allows people to start global businesses from home with very little "overhead." You only have to buy a cheap computer and some internet access to get your "virtual" door open for business.

Now all you have to do is to find a product to buy and then sell to customers and then ship the products to them via US mail, Fedex or UPS.

That worked for a while until product and shipping costs ate up all of your "profits".

Plus, it's a headache to find products cheap enough to sell for profit, purchase products, repackage, ship to customers, collect payments, deal with returns and on and on.

Very time consuming, not fun, low profit margins.

Then someone re-invents "Referral Marketing"

Many, many years ago, some smart people came up with a way to sell products through a system called Referral or Network Marketing.

This is where you purchase products (inventory) directly from a company, usually for your own use, and then you tell your friends about the company and if your friends buy their products/inventory from the company, the company will give you a commission for spreading the word about this company and their products.

Then, your friends tell their friends, you AND your friends make commissions.

Their friends tell their friends, you and your friends and their friends make commission for referring the company and so on and so on.

Before long, everyone is making enough commissions to pay for their own products/inventory.

Some people find enough friends/customers to cover the cost of their products/inventory and some people find a lot of customers to make a profit to cover their products and then some.

This may be where Mr. "Mart" got his idea for his super huge global empire??

This Business Model Allows Many Companies To Thrive.

With the combination of this marketing plan and the internet, many companies spring up.

Most have unique and high-quality products that are easy to promote and sell.

Some have average products, but they pay a higher commission than the other companies.

The commissions are attractive, but the quality makes it harder to build a sustainable business.

All of these companies have different commission structures and rules and regulations about how they want to pay their affiliates. Some are good, some are not so good.

WE HAVE FOUND THE BEST OF THE BEST!!

In our quest to find the best company, with the best products, with the best pay plan, with the best business opportunity for the most people, we have partnered with a company named American Dream Nutrition. Also known as ADN, for short.

This company has all of the good features mentioned above, but none of the bad features.
